As of Friday, May 09, 2008 8:00am, the City of Marshall is no longer requesting residents to voluntarily curtail water usage for non-essential uses. This will allow citizens and business to resume normal water consumption.

We would like to offer both our apologies for the inconvenience that the voluntary curtailment might have placed on citizens and businesses and our thanks for the efforts that were made. The concerned response of the citizens of Marshall did make a difference in our time of need. Due to the voluntary rationing of unnecessary water usage, we were able to continue plant operations safely.

The water plant will continue its expansion project throughout the year and would like to remind everyone that water is one of our most precious natural resources; we should always make every effort to conserve whenever possible.
